

1978 a 'growth and challenge' year in Upland

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

New ground rules created uncertainty for the future of city finances, but helped bring order to residential development in Upland during 1978.

City Manager Lee Travers called the year one of "growth and challenge" for the city.

As with other cities and local governments throughout the state, Proposition 13 brought the most dramatic impact upon city government in Upland during the year.

"It became sort of a whole new and different approach," Travers said, referring to the state constitutional amendment limiting property taxes.

After grappling with Proposition 13 for several budget sessions, the Upland City Council adopted a budget of nearly $12.9 million in late June.

The council restored $1.57 million in proposed budget cuts once legislation was passed allocating the state's surplus and the city received word it would receive about $1 million as its share of the remaining property tax collected under the Jarvis initiative.

Mayor George Gibson commented, "On the whole, I think that services have been maintained quite well."

Repeated explanations of changes in budget procedures failed to stem some residents' misgivings about a budget for fiscal 1978-79 that appears to be nearly $3 million more than the budget just under $10 million for last fiscal year.

Travers defended the changes in procedures as "much improved over previous years," giving a fuller picture of Upland's revenues and expenditures.

If not all residents followed these budget changes, the impact of Proposition 13 became clearer when some cutbacks in services were not restored.

Reduced hours that counters are open for certain city departments, 22½ hours off the library's weekly schedule, higher fees for classes through the recreation department, a recent decision to have youth sports groups pay for electrical bills at city fields and no permanent repairs of sidewalks this fiscal year were among the more noticeable cuts.

Gibson said Proposition 13 ushered in a "period of adjustment" for the city. That adjustment will continue in 1979, and future city finances will remain cloudy until new state legislation.

But if the year painted an unclear picture for Upland's future finances, 1978 also brought the city's residential development into sharper focus.

Upland concluded its first year under a growth-management plan at the end of July. The plan — with its point-rating system for determining which residential projects have priority — helped promote building in already-developed areas.

This reversed a recent trend in the city toward development in northernmost Upland. One aim of the plan is to reduce the cost of extending public services to outlying sections of Upland by first directing growth to older parts of the city.

Gibson and others credited the growth-management plan with reducing densities on incoming developments, because fewer residential units means more points under the plan.

The plan also contributed to a surge in condominium developments for which developers could more easily reduce densities and gain points than they could for traditional single-family homes.

In two amendments to Upland's general plan, the council outlined the course of future development at opposite ends of the city.

Maximum residential density for the 814-acre northwest area of Upland — the largest remaining section of undeveloped land in the city — was limited to three units per acre for conventional homes.

However, innovative planned residential units may qualify for a "density bonus" allowing a maximum of four units per acre. The general plan amendment was adopted in March after long debate by council members and planning commissioners.

The next month, the council adopted another general plan amendment, this one focusing on 1,234 acres in southeast Upland.

Through a multitude of changes for small subareas within the southeast quadrant, the amendment is aimed at reducing mixed land uses for the future of the oldest area of development in the city.

Another major planning initiative was the enactment of a moratorium currently in effect on accepting applications for most new development on Euclid Avenue from the San Bernardino Freeway to Eugene Court.

The city is studying code amendments to ensure quality and consistency of future development on Euclid.

The 20-acre Mountaingreen Center, Upland's largest shopping center, opened its first doors in late September at the northwest corner of Mountain Avenue and Seventh Street.

Earlier that month, Vanguard Companies abandoned plans for a six-story shopping and office center in the face of council concerns over traffic and fire protection. The firm is pursuing a proposal for a more conventional center now at the site near Mountain Avenue and Foothill Boulevard.

Upland's third fire station opened in early September on the east side of Benson Avenue north of 13th Street. Adjacent to the station are new city yards completing a $1.28 million project.

Work continued throughout the year on the Upland Community Center, 352 E. C St., and kitchen facilities to provide meals for senior citizens are near completion.

In March elections, Frank Hoover, a plumbing contractor, outpolled nine other candidates to win his first term on the Upland City Council. Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy and Councilwoman Ina Petokas were re-elected.

In November, more than 82 percent of Upland voters cast non-binding ballots in favor of completing the Foothill Freeway, but the proposed extension of Route 30 through the city still faces uncertainty at the state level.

Upland satisfied with first-year savings

Self-insurance plan successful

Satisfied with its first-year savings on premiums, the city of Upland will depend even more heavily on a program of self-insurance for protection against liability claims in 1979.

The city first became largely self-insured this January after Upland officials received premium quotes 250-350 percent higher than what was paid for liability protection in 1977.

Finance Director Anthony Andrade called city officials "generally happy" with Upland's first year of the self-insurance program.

He noted skyrocketing premiums from private insurance companies in recent years have produced a trend toward self-insurance in many cities that have the "financial strength" for such a program.

A check of surrounding cities bears out Andrade's statement. Four of six cities neighboring Upland have at least some form of self-insurance.

Upland's reliance on self-insurance appears to be as extensive as any city's in the area. In addition to liability protection, Upland has self-insurance for workers' compensation, long-term disability and unemployment.

Actually, Upland combines its basic city coverage with policies from private firms to protect against catastrophic losses. Other cities take the same approach in coverage Upland City Manager Lee Travers has described as "layered."

Andrade said Upland will be more reliant on self-insurance during 1979 than this year because of the elimination of the annual aggregate stop loss and an increased city responsibility for payment per incident.

This year Upland has been responsible for the first $75,000 per claim or settlement compared to $500,000 next year. The city maintained an aggregate stop loss this year with its insurance companies responsible for total claim payments over $300,000.

Andrade said the stop loss and lower responsibility for payment per individual claim this year were safeguards for the city as it "felt its way into self-insurance."

Review of the program has made city officials "confident" Upland can eliminate the stop-loss protection, he said.

Andrade added that the $500,000 figure for city responsibility per claim represented the most cost-effective program outlined during bids from eight firms.

Another major change in Upland's coverage brings liability protection up to $10 million through policies with Puritan Insurance and Admiral Insurance. The city was responsible for any amount above $5 million this year.

Andrade estimated Upland has saved some $480,000 in premiums this year through self-insurance for liability. The city paid $162,114 in premiums compared to the quoted figures ranging around $650,000 had Upland continued with exclusively private coverage.

With 1978 drawing to a close, Upland has paid out $13,318 in claims so far this year, Andrade said. He pointed out the city would have been responsible for $2,382 of that amount under past $2,000 deductibles carried by private firms.

Andrade said that with increased reliance on self-insurance Upland's liability premiums will drop about 48 percent to $85,000 in 1979.

The insurance management firm of R.L. Koutz in Los Angeles provides administrative services for Upland's self-insurance program.

Andrade indicated 1978 has been a "good year" for Upland in lawsuits. Other cities have not been so fortunate.

The city maintains a $3 million in a liability insurance trust fund to protect against possible claims.

Finance directors in other cities echoed Andrade's satisfaction over self-insurance programs. Chino, Fontana, Montclair and Claremont carry some type of self-insurance.

Claremont has perhaps the most unique program in the area.

Finance Director Lee Aurich explained that Claremont joined a consortium of 50 cities through a joint-powers agreement on liability insurance this May.

He said the city cut its premiums by $50,000 in the arrangement that spreads out risk among the 50 member cities.

Plans for hospital announced

San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland hopes to break ground in the fall of 1979 on a $14.5 million project that features replacement of currently crowded facilities in the hospital's critical-care unit.

Hans Wiik, associate administrator of the hospital, said expansion of facilities for treatment of intensive-care and coronary patients ranks as the highest priority in the hospital's master plan.

Replacing the two components of the critical-care unit forms a major part of the overall $14.5 million project.

Wiik said other aspects of the building program include additions and refurbishing of areas used for surgery, hospital purchasing and central services, and a cardiac rehabilitation program.

That program is currently housed in temporary quarters on the third floor of the hospital, Wiik said. By 1981, he added, the hospital hopes to have a permanent facility for recovery treatment of outpatients following heart attacks.

But the intensive-care and coronary facilities are the central focus of the project.

Wiik noted the critical-care unit was converted from normal bed space in the main building of the hospital as a temporary solution in 1964. Since then, the unit has lacked needed space for beds and staff, he added.

San Antonio Community Hospital has witnessed a "great growth in emergency traffic," Wiik said, pointing to rapid building in the West End, the proximity of the San Bernardino Freeway and other increased emergency requirements.

The hospital serves as home medical base for paramedic runs by B and B Medevac, Kniffin Ambulance Service and the Ontario Fire Department. It will perform the same duties for the Upland Fire Department if a citizens' committee is successful in bringing public paramedic service to the city.

Wiik said the hospital currently has eight beds for intensive care and four beds for coronary care. Occupancy has been 75-80 percent for years, he said.

He explained that San Antonio's "philosophy" for critical care is to keep one bed open for new emergencies, meaning the unit is at full capacity with the high occupancy rate.

With the expansion, the hospital will have a 12-bed intensive-care unit and six-bed coronary unit by 1981.

Wiik said the new critical-care facilities will be a second-floor addition close to both the emergency room and surgery.

Drawings show the units in two circular arrangements with nursing stations as focal points. Wiik noted the new facilities will include waiting areas for patients' families not now available near the cramped quarters for critical care.

San Antonio Community Hospital averages 154 square feet of space per bed in the critical-care unit, well under the 400-560 square feet recommended by state standards.

He credited the staff with provided quality medical care in limited space.

Some $2 million will be spent on equipment alone, he said, adding, "There really have been tremendous technical advances" for treatment of respiratory distress, renal (kidney) failure and other disorders.

Before breaking ground for the new facilities, the hospital must first receive a certificate of need from the state Department of Health and the Inland Counties Health Systems Agency.

Wiik, who serves as chairman of the West End Task Force for the agency, said the hospital has submitted a full application and that public hearings will be held early in 1979.

The review process is aimed at avoiding costly duplication of health facilities.

Nearing completion is construction on the Price Center for Continuing Education — an inservice center for the continuing education of nurses — and new administrative offices. The center is expected to open in January.

Wiik said the new administrative offices will allow hospital staff to leave five or six of the eight leased mobile-home offices now used because of space shortages.

He noted the hospital's master plan was last updated in 1975 and that review placed priority on improving San Antonio's critical-care unit.

Some of the departments "yet to be addressed" master plan, Wiik said, are dietary, business, records, maintenance, emergency and physical therapy.

Unlike many medical institutions in the United States, San Antonio Community Hospital has "never totally vacated" existing structures on San Bernardino Road for completely new facilities, Wiik said.

Heavy winds can play havoc with large signs as employees of PBS Signs of Riverside know. David Baca, top, signals Bill Fish to lower the crane after repairing a sign damaged by recent high winds at the Mobile Station at Mountain Avenue and Seventh Street, Upland. The team does various jobs including crane service and neon sign repair, with most of their work coming from service stations, Fish said. (Staff photo)

Upland council changes meeting

The date for Upland's town hall meeting has been rescheduled to Jan. 22.

The city council picked the new date this week after two council members indicated they could not attend the town hall if it were held on Jan. 25, the previously suggested date.

Upland will hold the town hall beginning 8 p.m. at the Upland High School auditorium.

Council members scheduled the town hall in hopes of getting residents' suggestions on budget priorities for the city during fiscal 1979-80.

City Manager Lee Travers said Wednesday he is working on the form for a survey that will be run as a newspaper ad. The ad will list city services that residents may rank according to priority.

No date has yet been scheduled for the survey.

Madonna of the Trail

50th anniversary commemorated with medallions

Silver, bronze and aluminum medallions commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Madonna of the Trail memorial statue in Upland are available from the local chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution.

One side of the medallions — about the size of silver dollars — shows the statue's pioneer woman holding an infant while a second child clutches at her dress.

A map of the United States with 12 stars marking the locations of the madonna statues along historic Highway 40 is depicted on the reverse side.

The San Antonio Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) is helping plan a three-day celebration Feb. 10-12 of the Upland statue's golden anniversary.

Alta Visnak — co-chairwoman of the DAR's anniversary committee — said the medallions may be ordered by mail. Checks to the San Antonio Chapter, DAR, should be addressed to the organization, P.O. Box 353, Upland 91786.

Silver medallions are available for $13.25 each, $3.71 for bronze and $1.06 for aluminum. Prices include the charge for state sales tax.

Residents placing orders should include their mailing addresses. The medallions will be placed in small cases and sent to buyers by insured mail.

For further information about the medallions, call Mrs. Visnak, 982-7898, or Mrs. Carroll G. Kissick, co-chairwoman of the DAR anniversary committee, 982-3139.

Latch Key unlocks doors

Program offers alternative

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

When the holidays are over, will your child come home after school and have to unlock the door on a cold, uninhabited house?

Many parents are working and find it impossible to be at home when their children return from school.

There is an alternative. A program called Latch Key will open Jan. 2 in Ontario under the sponsorship of the YWCA of Greater Pomona Valley.

Latch Key, a daily, after-school program between the hours of noon and 5:30 p.m., is designed for children in kindergarten through sixth grade in the Ontario-Montclair School District.

Transportation will be provided from local schools to the Latch Key headquarters at the Trinity United Methodist Church, 705 E. I St., Ontario.

"Latch Key provides tender loving care and a fun, educational program," a YWCA representative noted.

Latch Key is the symbolic key children wear around their necks to unlock the door when they come home from school.

Children participating in Latch Key will have learning activities, snack time, films, field trips and library experiences. Other activities will include arts and crafts, cooking, music, drama and physical education.

The YWCA, a non-profit organization, is charging a moderate fee to cover only the costs of the program. Registration forms may be obtained at the YWCA headquarters, 1787 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, 91767.

For more information, call Gladys Naylor, executive director, at 622-1269 or Dorothy Stanley, program director, at 984-2564.

Latch Key, sponsored by the YWCA of Greater Pomona Valley, provides an alternative to a child entering a cold, uninhabited house after school hours. Christopher Anclam, 4, of Ontario, volunteered to illustrate what it would be like for a child to come home to an empty house after school. A door a child must unlock can seem bigger than life. ## Comprehensive plan drafted

Air quality: 1978 may be recalled as key year

by PETER WONG
Staff Writer

Air quality in Southern California during 1978 was the worst it has been in a decade. No resident of the West End of San Bernardino County could forget that during a long summer of smog alerts.

But a decade from today, 1978 may also be remembered as the year in which the first comprehensive plan was put together to clean up the region's polluted air.

That plan is expected to be approved in 1979 and is intended to show how state and federal air quality standards can be achieved by the mid-1980s.

The final draft of the air quality management plan was released Nov. 1. It contains 71 measures to clean up the air in the four-county South Coast air basin. The urban part of San Bernardino County is within the nation's smoggiest basin.

The plan was prepared by the South Coast Air Quality Management District and the Southern California Association of Governments, a six-county regional planning agency.

The original draft in August proposed 125 cleanup measures. But many of those were dropped in the final version.

"We've laid everything out on the table for the public to consider what all the alternatives are," Los Angeles City Councilman Marvin Braude said when the final plan was unveiled. Braude is a member of the district board.

"The point is that it (the plan) is going to have an impact on everyone's life.... Everyone is going to have to make some sacrifices in order that we can survive and do so in a healthy fashion."

Most of the controversial measures were not made part of the final draft. But a couple that remained will have an impact on millions of Southern Californians.

One of them is the annual inspection and maintenance of all automobiles. This would be done at state-supervised inspection stations through the South Coast air basin.

A car which fails the pollution control tests will be required to have a tuneup or other repairs at the owner's expense. The maximum cost for repairs is set at $50 per car.

As of March 1 this coming year, the inspections will be required for all cars which change ownership. Those will account for an estimated 15 to 25 percent of all automobiles in the four-county region.

Inspections of all cars would be required by 1983. The tests would be conducted when auto registrations are renewed. The inspection program would cost $100 million annually. A fee of $12 per inspection has been proposed to offset the cost.

The inspection program would increase employment in auto repair work slightly and improve fuel consumption by 1 to 2 percent.

Through inspections, 62 tons of hydrocarbons would be eliminated daily. Hydrocarbons react chemically with oxides of nitrogen to form oxidant, or the photochemical smog common in Southern California.

Federal law requires annual auto inspections in areas that are not likely to attain oxidant standards by 1982, including the South Coast air basin.

Another measure would encourage people to retire their older-model cars voluntarily. Those cars produce more pollutants than newer ones. The estimated cost of this measure is $22.5 million annually for seven years.

Other measures call for: — Pollution controls on new lawn mowers and other gasoline-powered garden equipment, $8.4 million annually.

— Greater passenger loads on commercial airline flights and fewer flights. This is expected to result in a savings for the airlines.

— Additional controls on refining and other chemical manufacturing, $37.9 million annually.

— Additional controls on painting and solvents, including substitute coatings, $49.3 million.

— Additional controls on power plants, $116 million.

(Measures that will affect transportation will be discussed in a separate article Monday.)

The annual cost of the plan is estimated at $500 million, or $50 to each of 10 million Southern Californians. One-time investment costs are estimated at $800 million.

The plan promises to save Southern Californians at least $1 billion annually in smog-caused damage.

Despite public sentiment to clean up Southern California's polluted skies, public comment on the air quality plan has been limited.

Riverside County Supervisor Al McCandless described the public response to the original draft in August as "disappointing."

"We do not want to make these decisions in a vacuum," said McCandless, who is chairman of the air pollution control district board.

Ontario Councilwoman Faye Myers Dastrup said many of the plan's 71 measures are complex and not clearly understood by the public.

Mrs. Dastrup is a member of the environmental quality committee of the Southern California Association of Governments.

Victorville Councilwoman Peggy Sartor offered her own explanation for the relative lack of public response. In a letter to Wes McDaniell, executive director of the county's transportation planning board, she said:

"(The lack of response) appears to be the result of everyone talking about air pollution for such a long time without much visible evidence of any progress being made."

The plan is required by a 1976 state law and the 1977 federal Clean Air Act Amendments. It shows how most air quality standards can be achieved by 1982 and what progress can be made toward carbon monoxide and oxidant standards by 1987.

The plan must be submitted by the South Coast Air Quality Management District and the Southern California Association of Governments by Jan. 31.

The California Air Resources Board and the state Legislature will review the plan and forward it to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Final federal approval is expected by July 1.

Without a plan, the Environmental Protection Agency can invoke sanctions that would deny local governments federal money for sewage treatment plants, housing, highways and public transportation.

The plan represents the first comprehensive effort to deal with air pollution on a regional basis and in all its aspects.

O-M student scores showed gains during 1978

By KEN SWART
Staff Writer

Despite the fact that children are entering the Ontario-Montclair School District apparently knowing less, they are coming away knowing more, said Dr. Jack Jones, district superintendent.

The recently released state reading scores, which showed significant improvement in the district's students, "is even more encouraging to me and it's a reflection on the job that the staff has done this year," Jones said.

"In looking back over this past year the central theme for the district has been to continue having children improve these basic skill areas," Jones said.

"We stress that," said Rose Kelber, board president. "I love innovative programs because I think children should find learning fun, but we have a responsibility to teach a young person how to prepare for the real world."

"In 1978 we were just beginning the use of (state mandated) competency exams, developed on a pilot basis, to determine what the average child should know," Jones said. "At least we got it started but it has to be refined in 1979 before we can determine if it really accomplishes what it's supposed to."

Mrs. Kelber agreed. "The competency tests are a big plus since it will make teachers and students accountable for what's being taught."

Both Jones and Mrs. Kelber noted the success of the management systems—programs designed to help teachers rate students on specific lessons so both can determine where there are weak areas.

"We continued to decline in enrollment while the minority population in terms of percentage increases," Jones said, adding that the district had 200 less children enrolled this year than last.

He explained that because of declining enrollment schools will become smaller while administrative costs become higher. This trend was offset by the closing of two schools this year, and the near-closing of a third.

"Even if Proposition 13 had not passed I suspect we would have had to look at closing down at least one school by the end of next year," Jones said.

The biggest challenge for the district administration in 1979 will be to make financial decisions imposed by Proposition 13, Jones said. "The question will be how to give employees a raise while still maintaining the educational programs."

In terms of the continuing negotiations between the administration and the teachers, "collective bargaining is still in its infancy stage and it's difficult for everybody," Jones said. "Hopefully we'll get to a point where both sides will be less emotional and more sophisticated about it."

He added "it isn't unusual for a district to negotiate a contract for a year."

"I'm delighted we settled on a contract with the classified employees, but I would like to have had the contract negotiations with the teachers finished before the end of the year," Mrs. Kelber said.

"The process does have a negative impact on the morale and basic function of the school district—educating children," Jones said.

A multi-year contract would be more desirable because "it would remove the emotional strain and frustration" of negotiating a contract annually, Jones said.

Mrs. Kelber agreed. "A multi-year contract would be nice but I don't think we'll get one."

"The single most important decision facing the school board next year is selecting a new superintendent," Jones said.

Jones added that it would be "inappropriate" for him to help determine his own replacement by serving on a selection committee, and even if he was asked he would decline the offer to serve on such a committee.

"I just hate to see Jack go," Mrs. Kelber said. "I hope we can get someone as good for the job. That's the greatest concern of the board right now, even though we have excellent people running the district."

Among the existing programs that have done well, "our career education program (Project MATCH) received statewide recognition this year as one of the ten best school programs," Jones said, "and we will be going to other states to introduce the program."

Project MATCH (Matching Attitudes and Talents to Career Horizons) "provides the practical application of basic skills and gives students the opportunity to get experience in careers," Jones said.

"Among the highest performing schools in the district are those that utilize the Miller-Unruh reading program, and we should see greater growth and improvement in reading as a result," Jones said.

The Miller-Unruh reading program uses a specifically trained reading specialist as a resource teacher in several schools in the district.

Despite the success of these state programs, "I'm concerned about the erosion of local control by programs the state mandates," Mrs. Kelber said.

She added that she would like to see the development of an alcohol abuse program and a strengthened Mentally Gifted Minors (MGM) program in the coming year.

Court rules on felony complaints

Numerous cases involving felony charges were judged recently in West Valley Superior Court. Names, addresses, charges and dispositions are as reported by the district attorney's office.

Conviction charges in some instances may be affected by terms of a plea agreement between defendant and prosecutor. In cases where the sentence prescribed is a term in the county jail, the original felony charge reverts to a misdemeanor.

The cases and dispositions include:

For too many years you've been paying too much for your eyewear. You've been charged whatever your optometrist or optician has decided was a fair price. But did you ever wonder how that pricing structure was set up? Why are frames, contact lenses and other materials one price here...another price there? The answer, of course, is the average eyecare specialist is also a small businessman who establishes his own price schedules.

A NEW LOOK AT PROFESSIONAL OPTOMETRY

The average optometrist sees about five patients a day with an average profit percentage of 40%. At Dr. Katz's National Vision Centers that margin has been drastically reduced. How do we do it? By staffing our offices to handle 20 to 30 patients a day, we are able to reduce our profit structure...an obvious plus for you. In hard figures, you'll save from 25 to 50 dollars on eyeglasses and from 75 to 125 dollars on contact lenses.

SERVICE AND QUALITY NEVER DISCOUNTED

Your eye examination will be one of precision, care and thoroughness. Depth perception and color vision are tested first. The Doctor will then give you a complete eye health examination... a check for possible eye disease including a painless glaucoma test. To determine your eyeglass prescription, precise refractive measurements are then taken. These important procedures usually take about 30 minutes.

YOUR CHOICE

Now it's time for you to select the frame and lens style that will enhance your appearance. A qualified optician will aid you in choosing the eyewear that's perfect for you.

Your first impression is one of fantastic selection in eyewear styles. Select designer frames like Christian Dior, Diane Von Furstenberg, Oscar de La Renta, Pierre Cardin, Ralph Lauren, Anne Klein, Elizabeth Arden and others... as well as Bausch and Lomb, American Optical and Avante Garde.

Up to six times as many frames and lens styles than most optical places in whatever price range and style for any age...rimless, metal, half-eye and plastic. Speaking of lens styles, we carry both impact-resistant glass or plastic...the new American Optical Ultravue™ invisible bifocal, sunglasses, custom shapes, tints, personalization or sunsensors. And, because we purchase in large quantities, we can pass substantial savings on to you.

WE DO OUR OWN WORK

At our on-premises optical laboratory, you will see lenses being ground, edged and fitted by one of our opticians. Not only does this save you money, but it insures the best in service and quality.

CONTACT LENSES

Conventional hard lenses, flex lenses, gas-permeable and soft contact lenses are expertly fitted. Included in the price of all contact lenses is complete examination, fitting, dispensing and one year follow-up procedures. Bausch and Lomb and Hydrocurve soft lenses include both cold chemical or dry heat sterilization kits. ALL HARD LENSES INCLUDE A LIFETIME INSURANCE POLICY AGAINST LOSS AND DAMAGE. That's important to you.

THE COMPLETE VISUAL SERVICE

Of course, there is filling of eyeglass prescriptions, adjustments and repairs, lens duplication, contact lens replacement and a one-year breakage guarantee on glass lenses.

THE NEW BIG 10 POLICY

If you're a senior citizen...if you need multiple prescriptions...if you have two or more family members in need of eyewear...if you wear contact lenses and want eyeglasses as well, you will qualify for the new BIG 10...an additional 10% SAVINGS on eye care materials.

Again, you will save from 25 to 50 dollars on eyeglasses and from 75 to 125 dollars on contact lenses.

Insurance and union plans, BankAmericard/Visa and Master Charge are welcomed. We'll even accept cash!

Now...any questions? Give us a call.

Our prices bring you in... our quality brings you back.

Maxine Odom of Rosemead, Ontario International Airport's two millionth passenger this year, waves to her husband after stepping off PSA flight 290 from San Francisco Friday morning.

To mark the milestone in the airport's growth, she was presented with gifts by airport, city and airline officials. The airport has never before had two million passengers in one year.

Suddenly, a celebrity ...of sorts

By GLENN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

She was about to become a sort of instant celebrity, but, as a passenger on a PSA flight from San Francisco to Ontario Friday, Maxine Odom of Rosemead didn't know it yet.

Dignitaries were waiting to greet her at Ontario International Airport as the two millionth air passenger to pass through the facility this year.

It was a milestone in the growth of the 49-year-old airport, which has never before had that many passengers in one year.

Mrs. Odom, returning from a visit to her son in Santa Rosa, said she was told about the honor by a PSA representative a few minutes before landing.

"I just couldn't believe it. I can't believe it yet," she said after a brief ceremony in the west lobby of the airport, still a little shaken by the unexpected course of events.

After her flight landed, she was escorted to the lobby for speeches and gift presentations by airport, city and airline representatives before an audience of about 50.

Humor was injected by Homer

Briggs, Ontario mayor pro tem, who presented her with a key to the city.

Lest she doubt its worth, he told her, "Along with 50 cents, this will buy you a cup of coffee anywhere in Ontario."

Stephen C. Bilheimer, president of the Los Angeles Board of Airport Commissioners, a post he also held in 1972 when the airport first had one million passengers in one year, greeted her.

She was also greeted by Richard Evans, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, who presented her with a plaque.

Five appointed to assessment appeals board

Five additional persons have been appointed to the San Bernardino County Assessment Appeals Board to handle this year's workload, which is almost three times the number of appeals filed last year.

Andree Disharoon, interim clerk of the board, reports that 1,400 property tax assessment appeals have been filed this year. In recent years, assessment appeals have averaged between 300 and 500 cases each year.

Hearing officers approved by the board of supervisors are:

— Lester E. Crossley of Bloomington, a self-employed business consultant who has had 16 years experience as a chief appraiser.

— Donald D. Morrison of San Bernardino, who is also self-employed. He previously was a right-of-way appraiser with the state Division of Highways before it became the Department of Transportation.

— Walter Payne of Barstow, a former appraiser with the county assessor's office with 20 years experience.

— Fred Perkins of San Bernardino, a self-employed real estate appraiser. He has experience as a chief appraiser at Santa Fe Federal Savings and Loan. He also worked under contract with the Army Corps of Engineers.

— Earnest Speier of San Bernardino, a former appraiser in the county assessor's office. He performs appraisals for various savings and loan associations throughout the county and has more than 15 years experience in the field.

Mrs. Disharoon said that about 300 cases will be handled without a hearing as they are claims for refunds.

Last year, on the recommendation of the county assessor, the board of supervisors approved the use of hearing officers in assessment appeals.

Make preparations before going to snow

Tips offered on freeing car

Motorists going to snow play areas, ski resorts or driving through places where snow is likely are advised by the Automobile Club of Southern California to make advance preparations for the possibility of their vehicle becoming stuck in the snow.

Donald D. Treichler, the Auto Club's public safety manager, said drivers can help free cars that are not too seriously immobilized if they follow simple precautions — such as carrying a shovel and sand in the trunk — and know a few "tricks of the trade."

Treichler offers some suggestions for freeing a vehicle:

Try forming a runway in deep snow by shoveling a path or rocking the car gently backwards and forwards in increasing lengths, until a runway of about a car's length is formed ahead of the wheels.

Then try to drive the car out. Shift from reverse to low repeatedly while passengers or helpers push from the sides of the car, where they'll be clear if your "take-off" is successful. (Don't do this for more than a few minutes as the transmission can be damaged easily). Use gentle, steady pressure on the accelerator. Flooring the gas pedal will only cause the rear wheels to spin.

Sand or other coarse material sprinkled in the runways in front and back of the rear wheels also will help provide traction. Common unused kitty litter works just as well, besides being lighter and easier to store in the trunk than sand.

A bumper jack base or hubcap makes a good impromptu shovel for digging out, Treichler continued.

Tire chains are the best means of getting through snow. But putting them on in a snow storm is a hand-chilling, messy job. Treichler said chains also can serve as a runway if you don't have traction mats — both handy items that can be placed in front of the rear wheels to help provide starting traction.

If you're heading into snow country, the Auto Club suggests you carry the following items in the trunk of your vehicle: reinforced tire chains; sand or other coarse material or traction mats; a small snow shovel; ice scraper and snow brush; flashlight; flares; jumper cables and a blanket. Such advance preparations can prevent many winter emergencies.

Finally, should your efforts fail, and before calling for professional help, turn on your emergency flashers to warn other motorists of the danger. If possible, have someone stay with the car.

Muscle pains not serious

In later life many people suffer from muscle cramps in the legs, especially during the night. Science has yet to come up with a clear explanation for this complaint. While these cramps may be quite painful and annoying to the afflicted individual, they usually are not associated with any serious abnormality.

All sorts of remedies have been tried but, since the cause has yet to be discovered, there is no widely effective cure or preventive. Physicians may prescribe a variety of medicines, one of which may prove effective in an individual case. The cramp always subsides in time and recovery is generally speeded by local massage or stretching of the muscle.

More serious is the leg cramp which occurs during activity. Cramping pain which arises in the calf of the leg while walking and subsides with rest should always be brought to the attention of a physician. One cause of this symptom is obstruction of circulation of blood in the legs. When muscle is deprived of its usual supplies of oxygen and nutrition by way of the blood stream, pain quickly develops. Walking brings this on because it increases the muscle's need for nutrition.

An extremely rare cause of circulatory obstruction is Buerger's disease. It consists of a local narrowing of the arteries supplying the legs. Persons with this condition must avoid the use of tobacco because they are particularly sensitive to the artery-constricting effect of nicotine.

Somewhat more common than Buerger's disease as a cause of leg cramps is aortic aneurysm. This is a ballooning out of a weak area in the wall of the body's main artery. When it occurs where the main arteries to the legs begin, such an aneurysm may obstruct the flow to one or both sides. Fortunately, it is possible, through surgery, to replace the damaged artery and reestablish adequate blood flow to the legs of many sufferers.

In other cases, where aneurysm is not present, a blood clot may form at the entrance to one or both of the legs' main arteries or a clot from some other location may become lodged there. In either case, the obstruction to circulation often can be relieved surgically.

While these serious conditions are much less common than harmless nighttime cramping, satisfactory treatment depends on early diagnosis and restoration of the circulation before the legs are badly damaged. Anyone having intermittent leg pain with activity should be examined promptly to make sure that circulation to the legs is adequate.

Applications for summer and seasonal employment with the U.S. Forest Service will be accepted between December 1, 1978, and January 15, 1979, announced Gary Kriezel, Personnel Officer, Sequoia National Forest.

"The Sequoia has two different programs open for temporary employees — Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) staff, about 22 positions, and about 250 positions working in conservation-related tasks," said Kriezel.

Kriezel explained, "the YCC staff needs include an assistant Camp Director, environmental education specialists, project work leaders, camp counselors, and group aids. The staff oversees approximately 50 high school students between the ages of 15 - 18 from June 23rd to Labor Day. An applicant for a camp staff position completes a SF-171 form and submits it to Sequoia National Forest Headquarters, 900 W. Grand Avenue, Porterville, CA 93257."

There are temporary positions available in timber, recreation, fire, or range management; biological science; or engineering. "An applicant for these positions could be hired to collect campground fees, man a fire lookout, mark timber, or be on a few crew," said Kriezel. "The procedure for applying for one of these jobs is to complete 'Application for Temporary Employment' — form 6100-23. This form must be mailed directly to Forest Service, USDA, Temporary Employment, 630 Sansome Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 and postmarked no later than January 15, 1979." Kriezel concluded that to qualify for consideration, an applicant must be 18 years old or over, an United States citizen, and able to meet certain physical standards. Applications for Sequoia National Forest YCC staff and other Temporary Employment can be picked up at any U.S. Forest Service office.

Chaffey faced, overcame big '78 problems

By PEGGY ZIEGLER
Staff Writer

Serious financial difficulties, a leadership crisis, a recall drive and the layoff of 500 part-time employees were some of the problems faced by Chaffey College in 1978.

The college recorded one of its worst years financially when a miscalculation of average daily attendance figures caused the budget to fall short by $750,000. As a result the college trustees were forced to take money from the reserve account to make up for losses in the budget.

A few months later, the college was again hit with money problems with the passage of Proposition 13. In all, the school lost $2.5 million in the wake of Jarvis-Gann tax cuts.

Financial problems were also one of the reasons Superintendent-President Kenneth C. Hinrichsen decided to retire in April.

His request to the board of trustees came on the heels of severe criticism in the handling of enrollment estimates that caused the school to receive less money from the state than anticipated.

Appointed in his place in a one-year temporary position was Dr. James L. Catanzaro, formerly assistant superintendent of personnel services at the college.

Catanzaro's appointment, though, was clouded by controversy when several faculty, staff and students protested saying June Teitsworth, vice president of student services, should have been appointed to the college's top job.

At the same time, the board of trustees was coming under fire from various groups. A recall drive was initiated by college employees.

The board was charged with fiscal irresponsibility, participating in unfair personnel practices, showing disrespect to community spokespersons, refusing to accept responsibility for its actions and not acting in their best interest of the students.

Members of the board of trustees are Dr. Lester Stroh, president, Kenneth Ketner, vice president, Herschel Glenn, Sharon Jeffers and Clarence Saunders.

The recall drive failed in its effort when not enough signatures were collected on petitions.

An employee morale problem developed early in the year that caused the administration and board of trustees to come under attack for their handling of college affairs.

The matter was made worse by Proposition 13, when the administration was forced to cut 500 part-time teachers from the payroll to save money.

The year was bleak, but a turn around began during the summer, according to Catanzaro.

"Everything has shaped up faster than I ever expected," he said. "The financial situation, even with Proposition 13, looks good. The district is solvent and we are tracking all expenditures very carefully. We expect to end the fiscal year with about $800,000 in reserves."

Upland News, Rancho Cucamonga Times, Montclair Tribune

Catanzaro said the college "at no time in its history" had lost so much money and had a financial situation "so bleak."

"But we're on target now," he said. "It's very gratifying."

He attributed the turn around to the cooperation of the staff.

"One of the reasons we are doing so well is the fine spirit of cooperation of the staff. They are playing fair and being prudent," Catanzaro said. "There has also been a tremendous spirit of cooperation in developing a community of learning and sharing ideas. It's a spontaneous and healthy atmosphere."

In the coming year, Catanzaro said the college will begin a major private fund-raising effort.

"We will be looking to private foundations for donations and go after major funding sources," he said.

In addition, Catanzaro said the college will be "working towards building itself as a cultural center of the community."

A student recruitment drive will also begin next year. Catanzaro indicated there are a lot of people not aware of courses Chaffey offers in the vocational education area.

Minister works to bring healing in church setting

By Lynne Locke

"I don't believe God intended us to have disease," commented the Rev. Q. E. Hendricks who noted interest in spiritual healing is increasing.

Even the scientific world is giving more credit to healing through prayer, said Hendricks, who has 22 years of experience with healing through the Evangelical United Brethren (EUB) and United Methodist churches.

The Rowland Heights resident said scientists have discovered that cells change much more rapidly than was once thought.

And, he said, new scientific understanding is that cells "take the form we subconsciously want them to take."

Thus, every church service can be a healing experience, said Hendricks, who said he views his role as "helping put a seed into the subconscious mind to bring about good conditions."

But, he said, healing has to be handled carefully. "So many have played on emotions to build a following and get financial remuneration. I feel we have to bring it back to the normal position in the church where God intended it to be."

Hendricks pointed to the situation in Jonestown as the kind of problem that can arise when the idea of healing "becomes independent of the community" and is no longer responsible to anyone.

The United Methodist minister has performed the healing ministry in private counseling situations and in healing services, but, he noted, he carries out his ministry under the supervision of the church hierarchy, particularly his district superintendent and the bishop.

Hendricks has been recognized as conference director of healing ministries for the EUB and later for the United Methodist Church, which was formed in 1969 by a Brethren - Methodist merger.

He has served as a part-time minister at Whittier First United Methodist Church for 1½ years and Jan. 1 was appointed interim minister for La Puente United Methodist Church.

Hendricks has found the healing ministry to be accepted "beautifully" by the congregations he has served.

The secret, he said, is that healing is seen as a ministry of the church as a whole, not as the ministry of an individual person.

"I don't have the gift of healing. I wish I did," he said and added, "I don't know of anyone in all the associations I've had who I could point to and say, 'They have the gift of healing.'"

Hendricks said he does have a sense of "something happening" during the simple healing service with laying on of the hands. But, he said, "I never promise anything. I say, 'God is the healer.'"

Even so, he said he finds it difficult when healing doesn't happen.

"There are times when we don't get the kind of answer we think we ought to get. But it doesn't mean God has failed in bringing healing," he said.

United Methodists study reorganization

A proposed reorganization of the United Methodist Church would split Pomona Valley churches from the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

A study of geographical organization was requested in 1978 by United Methodist bishops in the western United States.

If the present proposal is accepted, the Pacific and Southwest annual conference would be split into two conferences in July 1980.

Pomona Valley churches, along with the San Diego metropolitan area, and Arizona would be included in one conference. The Los Angeles metropolitan area stretching north to Santa Maria, as well as Hawaii, would be in the second conference.

United Methodist churches in the western United States have been eligible for an additional jurisdiction and bishop for some time. The Pacific and Southwest conference is the largest of the geographical organizations in the western states — including nearly one-third of the United Methodists in the geographical conferences.

The Rev. Cornish Rogers and Dr. Richard Cain, both of Claremont, represent the Pacific and Southwest conference on boards which will consider the reorganization in January.

Rogers, who is senior minister at Claremont United Methodist Church, said he feels division of the conference cannot be stopped even though past proposals have been termed "impossible."

Formation of a new area would provide another bishop to handle administrative responsibilities, he said and noted the split would also provide more representation for the area on general church boards and agencies.

"We will also be able to focus on missional needs more specifically," Rogers said.

Hearings on the final proposal will be held in Los Angeles, Phoenix, and San Diego in the fall of 1979.

Nurse Rosemary Zink calms the fears of a young Guatemalan boy making a visit to a Project HOPE public health clinic near his home. Project HOPE, supported by religious groups and individuals throughout the United States, is training Guatemalans to provide health care to their own people both in hospitals and rural clinics. Project HOPE works in Central and South America, the Caribbean, Africa, Europe, and the United States.

'Dream' home needs its own personality

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have bought a very nice but very plain new home in the suburbs which should be my dream home. The builder painted all the walls white and we have a medium-brown carpeting in nylon shag in the living room and dining room.

We have been living in an apartment with early marriage cast-off furniture which we brought with us to our new home. I am really disappointed in our home because it lacks any personality and is just like every other house on our block. I like traditional things like wingback chairs and Oriental rugs and lanterns and books, but I also want some contemporary things in the house.

My husband and I are do-it-yourselfers so we plan to do much of the work ourselves. But where do we start? — W.C.

A. I'd start by going through home magazines and tearing out pictures of things you like — whole rooms, pieces of furniture, accessories, color schemes and related subjects.

Browse through every department store, design gallery and furniture shops you can find. If you have a fine art museum in your city, browse through the museum's library to see what's available in good furniture and home design books.

After a few months of collecting ideas and pictures, you'll see that a pattern begins to emerge — that certain styles and designs recur in your collection.

You will probably want to include the medium-brown carpeting in your color scheme because that is a large item. Why not a muted peach and white wallpaper on your walls with the addition of stock molding to give you attractive ceiling and baseboard woodwork which many new homes lack. Paint the woodwork the muted peach.

If you are keen on Oriental rugs, look for one in a cream and peach and brown (and maybe it could have other colors, too). Orientals look grand on carpeted floors, especially creating a seating arrangement with sofas and chairs.

Select a pair of cream-colored leather wingback chairs or a woven cream in wool or nylon. Or select one wingback chair and a pair of short sofas to pair up instead of one long one. Accessorize by combining the best of the past with the best of the present to add a contemporary piece here and there. Perhaps a gleaming chrome leg on a wood-topped coffee table or end table would give you the eclectic look you want.

Look carefully at your early marriage furniture. Sometimes a slipcover or a coat of paint will do a grand disguising job.

Q. I live in a very old home which we are remodeling. In the dining room, there are four sliding closet doors (it used to be a bedroom) that appear to stand out from the wall because they are wooden and perfectly flat. How might I treat them, if I plan to wallpaper the room? — T.P.B.

A. You would do well to wallpaper over the doors as well as the walls to give a unity to your room. This would make the doors blend into the walls. Check into the kind of sizing you will need for both walls and doors so you will have good adhesion to both.

Also I have seen designers wallpaper a room in a background design and then take a coordinated mural design and apply it to doors (by cutting the mural into sections).

Individuality is added to a plain living room with wallpaper and the addition of stock molding at the ceiling, floor and around the fireplace to give a traditional look to this room. Wall covering is from Wall-Tex.

Income tax forms scheduled to arrive

Approximately 5.5 million federal tax packages are being sent to Southern California taxpayers this week. Tom Grace, Chief of the Internal Revenue Service Taxpayer Service Division in Los Angeles, said that taxpayers will receive either a 1040 or 1040A package, depending on the form they filed last year.

Taxpayers who need to file a different form this year because of a change in tax status can obtain the proper form and schedules from many sources. Local IRS offices and many post offices stock them. Extra forms may also be secured by using the order blank in the back of the tax package or by calling the IRS forms order telephone lines.

Taxpayers should use both the peel-off name label and the pre-addressed envelope provided in the original tax package they receive in the mail even if they decide not to file the form provided in that original package," explained Grace. "Using both the label and coded envelope will speed up the processing of the return and result in a faster refund."

If there is a mistake on the label or if the envelope is marked with an incorrect form number, the taxpayer should make any necessary changes in ink.

The step-by-step format of the tax forms, retained from last year, should make it possible for most taxpayers to complete their own returns with the aid of simplified instructions. Each instruction is numbered to correspond to a line on the return.

Thomasville's Vineyard

Decorating ideas are French

Country craftsmen in France during the 17th, 18th and early 19th centuries created simple furnishings which reflect native charm and creativity. These antiques were not the lightly scaled, fragile furniture of the French court, but robust, full-bodied pieces.

Thomasville designers have researched the era and created collectable pieces in the romantic French country tradition.

Thomasville's Vineyard cultivates many of those hearty, yet subtle feelings. It is massive enough to create feelings of permanence, original enough to leave an impression of country crafting, and as mellow as the sparkling patina of hand rubbed fruitwood... or to keep the analogy... as mellow as a rare vintage wine.

Take the bed for instance. It has four massive posters for solidarity, an abundance of turnings, and a carved floral tribute to romance.

The lighter fruitwood is beautiful, and naturally so... exhibiting every grain, every curve, every nuance of the wood. The dresser is big and roomy, designed for serving a definite storage purpose without ostentation. For instance, there are six big drawers... and behind the two doors, three generous trays. A trifold mirror serves the cause of practicality. Still, the curve of the foot, the depth of the base rail adds a shapeliness that is beautifully romantic.

The wardrobe offers surprising versatility on the inside. Adjustable shelves are divided in half to offer the option of either shelves or space for hanging clothes from a strong metal rack. And the useful and charming bedside table is just about as useful as a bedside table can be... with correct height, two drawers, one unexpected pullout shelf with a carving motif that has been reproduced from the bed it accompanies.

Thomasville's Vineyard collection also offers a heavier canopied bed and a lighter paneled headboard, as well as chests and cabinets to serve in appropriate size and available space.

Vineyard is a trendsetting collection that draws on needs for the freedom and security of remembered youth... real or imaginary.

Those heady, intoxicating memories often center around tables, dining room tables like the pedestal table long revered. Vineyard's dining room tables are just the kind everyone would like to have had and now still can. This pedestal table is much, much nicer than memories because of the intricate and beautifully matched top. What could be better than cane back chairs with woven fiber seats and seat pads?

The china cupboard is as fat and sassy as a distant country cousin... the one that carries her weight so well. It is a real blue ribbon prize winner that holds everything on three adjustable glass shelves behind glass doors. The doors and the wire grillwork are simply handsome and deliberately designed to hint of plenty... of wine and cheese and homemade jam. This is an earthy piece... heavy with rich real wood and graceful curves and hardware fashioned from historic prototypes.

It is easy to imagine long, comfortable, caring conversations in rooms decorated with Vineyard... surrounded by furniture as rich and hearty as the taste of vintage wine, with all the country charm of Bordeaux, as sweet and satisfying as the country life it's meant for... wherever you find it, either city highrise or country cottage.
